The world over, nations have been vying to attract tourists. And yet, a huge section of the intelligentsia. is convinced that more the tourists, the corresponding is the decline in pristine nature of the place. Parrot Island, in the calm and balmy waters of Andaman is one such place that has escaped the herd of tourists.

No wonder, that with its trimmed lush green mangroves and green meadows bordering the sea, it is nature at its best. Untouched and virgin miles of beach that are an answer to the prayers of those seeking solace in the arms of mother nature." place. Parrot Island, in the calm and balmy waters of Andaman is one such place that has escaped the herd of tourists.

Gifted with the combination of serenity and solitude, bluish backwater, which is neither flowing nor stagnant, Parrot Island is balm for the soul. Here the approach to the island is a pleasure. Five small islands form a stunning visage as one approaches this island. It is strange to see such a beautiful and gorgeous place, enchanting ambience and yet so largely unexplored. Naturally, I felt I was one the only luckiest spectator that evening, when I saw the beautiful visage of the five islands.

From Nilambur Jetty, there is the option of travelling to Parrot Island and the nearby Limestone caves. It takes 20 minutes boat ride from the Nilambur Jetty to Parrot Island. Without meandering, I can say with certainty that Parrot Island is a must visit for all Indians. As the evening sun descends down, the sky spreading a crimson colour which at times looks like a mix of orange , pink and purple light . ## True Grit

“Parth S. Sutaria, 14, Panvel, Mumbai

“THE DAY THAT WAS : JULY 26, 2005

“ AWARDED FOR : DRAWING A FLOOD TRAPPED FAMILY TO SAFETY

The rain refused to let up. The ground-floor of the building, inside the ONCG colony at Panvel, was already with water and the level was raising by the minute. At 8 p.m., the power went off, plunging the entire area into darkness. By that time, the water had risen from ground-level to a height of five feet. Parth and his mother were busy packing, afraid that they might have to vacate their first floor, flat, too. His father, a finance manager with ONGC, was struck on his way home. Suddenly they heard screams and banging. Parth rushed downstairs and waded through the water-neck-deep by this time-towards the ground-floor flat. Their door, he found out, was struck and, with the water-level rising alarmingly the trapped family liked an ominous future. Parth found a piece of log from a neighbour and began to hammer on the door. "People from the entire building had come down, but just stood paralysed," he says. After while, the mesh gave way but the main door still wouldn't open. By this time the water came almost up to his mouth. "I don't remember anything," he says, "just that door and the children crying inside and that he had to get them out." After many more heave, the top half splintered and fell through. The family was pulled out to safety. Not surprisingly, it is the army and its spirit and service that he admires the most.

Directions (Q. Nos. 9 – 12)

Read the passage and answer the questions given below it:

More than 175 species of birds can be seen in and around the city. Painted stork and Black Ibis are considered nearly threatened bird species as per international standards. But these birds can still be seen near Pune. However, their number is reducing rapidly. Birds like Lesser Flamingos have vanished, while species like Jungle crow and Black Winged stilt are seen everywhere. These birds indicate the high level of pollution in the city.

The disappearing of hills and forests air and water pollution are the major factors for this. The situation will worsen in the near future. The rapidly increase in the population will lead to further encroachment on bird habitats. Big trees, which are nesting areas for larger birds, are being cut to widen roads and build residential complexes. By law, it is compulsory for builders to replant trees if they have had to cut trees for building purposes. However, the builder lobby is least bothered about tree plantation and they are even excused after their grease palms.

It is high time we ensure that the right environment is created for the protection of birds. Birds are trying to adjust to their surroundings and all they need is a little support from us. Read the passage and answer the questions given below it :

As my habit, that morning too I stepped out onto our veranda to take in some air. Looking around, my glance fell on a bundle of green in a corner of the veranda. It was a parrot; its awkward switching indicated that it was alive. Even as I approached it the parrot made no effort to fly away. Parrots are intermittent visitors to our veranda but always skitter away if you get too close to them. It was obviously wounded in some way, I picked it up.

I expect we named it Hariyn because of its bright green plumage, and it became a family pet. A cage was bought more to protect Hariya from predators then to keep him imprisoned. In fact, we often let him out of his cage, so he could fly away if he wanted to, Hariya just didn't seem to want to. It was only after many days that we realized that he had never shown an urge to fly.

One day I took Hariya in my hands and gently examined him more thoroughly than we had ever done. To my horror I found that his wings had been stitched up with very fine plastic thread that was almost invisible to the naked eye. Someone had obviously taken great pains to ensure that Hariya couldn't fly.

Removing those threads was a very difficult task – it took me a whole week because it had to be done gently and slowly. It was only Hariya's faith and confidence in me that allowed it to happen. As I removed the last thread. Hariya squawked and fluffed his suddenly freed wings. Then his neck swiveled around and he just started at me. Hariya's eyes seemed, to be shining.

41. Hariya remained with the writer's family though he was not caged all the time because :

  - (3) he was a family pet and he liked it
  - (4) his wings were stitched up

- (1) he had a bright green plumage
  - (2) he had faith and confidence in the author
  - (3) he was wounded and weak
  - (4) he did not have an urge to fly and so remained calm
43. He had never shown an urge to fly.
(Replace the underlined word with a synonym.)
- (1) impulse      (2) courage      (3) desire      (4) ability
44. What were the indicators of the bird being alive ?
- (1) it made no efforts to fly away

  - (4) the writer could pick it up
